“ Thank you for your support when I first came here, you supported me and Manda in the early days and that meant a lot to me. I got to spend a lot of time with you back then and I got to know you and I have a lot of memories of it.

You cared enough to ask me whenever you saw me about how work was going, When I was having surgery in hospital you texted me to see how I was feeling. When manda was pregnant you asked her how she was doing and took interest in Luna's progress.

You became a grandpa to our baby and you did good, she loves you. She smiles when we show her pictures of you. We will make sure she never forgets you. Thank you for being so good with her and loving her.

Chiefs are getting ready to play, won't be the same without you there yelling and swearing at the TV! We will continue that tradition for you!

We feel and will continue to feel your loss, I think it's made people realize how much of a positive impact you had over the family and what you came to mean to everyone in the past 10 years. For me, knowing you 6 of those years, I can say it's been harder than I thought it would be to deal with this.

No more pain for you now. We will take it from here. We will all take care of your wife for you.

We love you. I love you. Rest in peace, brother.

“ I have been searching for words to express how I feel for days. In the beginning we were in a rough place due to what we had all been through and felt severely overprotective of our momma when we met Bill. We were also afraid to let anyone new in. We had our differences. And despite all of this Bill adopted us all as his own kids and grandkids despite how difficult we could be all the same. Due to this we all grew to love and appreciate how happy he made our Momma. We accepted him as both a Dad and Papa. He was always there ready to kick butt for us. We all feel the loss heavily. Myself and my husband and my children. He will be greatly missed and remembered. I still feel as though words are not good enough. Much love. Thanks for all you've done for us and loving us all as your own.
